

DIVORCE PHOTOGRAPHER - SHORT FILM SYNOPSIS

Carla, a seasoned wedding photographer, has just gone through yet another breakup. She has started to question her belief in love, her work, her life, and herself. The last thing she wants to do is shoot another wedding.

Kayla and Justin arrive for their wedding photography consultation and Carla launches into saleswoman mode - but there's something a bit different about this couple. They have a different request in mind - documenting their divorce. Carla is shocked but comforted and agrees to take on the assignment.

Carla shoots the divorce of Kayla and Justin in a Lawyer's Office - it is the exact opposite of a wedding ceremony. A handful of reluctant friends and family show up and what starts out civil ends with a fight between Kayla and Justin. Carla captures some very real, raw moments unlike anything she's shot before.

Following the Divorce ceremony, the couple throws a Divorce Party where a lot more of their friends show up and are happy they are able to finally be honest that they think this breakup is the right decision. At the party is Mark - a guy on the hunt for women. Only he has a theory that everyone gets divorced nowadays and you need to go through your first marriage in order to get it right. On the hunt for the perfect girl for his starter marriage, he approaches Carla and tries to woo her by skipping the relationship bullshit.

FEATURE FILM NOTE

The feature film is not written yet and as such I do not have a full synopsis.

However, it will follow Carla's journey as she realises that relationships may not always be what they appear. Her career as a divorce photographer begins to take off and divorce photography becomes more and more popular as people embrace the end of their relationships.

She also does get enticed into a new type of relationship with Mark where brutal honesty is their key focus. However, Mark keeps one minor detail to himself - that he doesn't plan for this relationship with Carla to last.